On June 22nd to June 24th I hosted the 20’s & 30’s Squam Camping weekend at Squam Lake in Holderness, NH. Believe it or not, this was actually my very first camping weekend with AMC ever! I decided to host the weekend after just recently deciding to take over as Co-Chair for the 20’s & 30’s Committee; I guess I wanted to jump right into the role and embrace the experience. Everything was completely new to me, but I trusted I had the skills for the position and the ability to plan events–I could totally do this.

Planning the camping weekend, handling the reservations, tracking the RSVPs and taking care of other logistics seemed easy at first, and I had help. But, as the weekend loomed, the nervousness kicked in. This was my first AMC event, and especially as Co-Chair, I wanted everything to go perfectly. I’d heard about this weekend before, although I had never had the opportunity to attend. I felt like I had to live up to the high standards set previous hosts, and as the time approached, those standards looked higher and higher.

This is the second in a continuing series of articles dedicated to finding and exploring hiking trails in New Hampshire that are often overlooked, but that are worth visiting.

While we all love the high peaks and popular destinations, such as Monadnock, Cardigan, Chocorua and the Moats, these destinations are frequently being loved to death, particularly on summer and autumn weekends. Help reduce the crowds and explore new and interesting places! You may even find that you prefer these “off the beaten track” trails.

Interesting Trails near Squam Lake: There are some nice, quiet trails in the Squam Lake area. One of us, Wanda, recently adopted a couple of the trails: the Prescott Trail and Old Mountain Road. These trails can be turned into some nice loops that include great views from Mount Livermore by combining them with the Crawford-Ridgepole Trail and Old Highway. There are a

I started to question myself: Am I outdoorsy enough? Will I compare to previous hosts?

This self-doubt stayed with me right up until the weekend came.

The weather forecast leading up to the weekend was looking more and more grim with each passing day and my perspective changed from “everything needs to go as planned” to “we’ll make the most of it.” But just days before the weekend (and by days, I mean the Thursday before) people began to reach out notifying me that they were no longer able to attend, and the panic began. No one was going to come! The weekend would be a disaster! I had failed!

Just as I was envisioning my epic downfall, the last minute RSVPs rolled in, including a few “I hope I am not too late” notes. When all was said and done, we were almost back up to our original attendance numbers. I could breathe again, everything was fine.

Friday, June 22nd, and the weekend was finally here. Check-in at the campground was at 12:00 pm, being the person I am, I arrived in Holderness at 10:30 am. I had never been to this campground before so I wanted to familiarize myself with the area before attendees arrived. Pulling up to the Chamberlin Reynolds Memorial Forest parking lot at 12:30, there was not one emergency vehicle in sight. It was like nothing ever happened, thank goodness. I could go back to being somewhat calm.

Once settled on my platform I was waiting for others to arrive and get familiar with the camp site. Slowly at first, and then more and more, the other participants arrived. The weekend was off, and things were beginning to look good!

The weather that first day was the best it was going to be all weekend. We had the most amazing sunset I had ever seen over the lake Friday night. I looked through the trees and saw dark red in the sky, when I went down to the beach the entire sky was on fire and the reflection off the lake was nothing short of amazing. It was a good sign!

I felt so much better at this point and knew the weekend was going to be great, and honestly, there was nothing else I could do at this point other than to try and enjoy it. Saturday started out promising with Chelsea Tweed (my fellow Co-chair) showing us an easy trail muffin recipe. All the hikes were able to go out with no rain. It was not until the afternoon that the rain arrived. Some of us were still hiking, and some of us were hiding out at the Common Man enjoying food and warm drinks. But rain can only last so long, and we were able to end the weekend with a nice campfire Saturday night, heating up leftover Common Man pizza over the fire and just enjoying the company of others.

After reflecting on everything I realized it was never about the weather being perfect or me being a good host. It was about the people who came. All of the people together is what makes these weekends a success and exactly why I joined AMC in the first place. Meeting new people who love the outdoors as much as I do and who don’t let a little rain or killer squirrels stop them from having a good time. I also learned that being a host does not mean you need to have endless knowledge about camping or insane outdoor survival skills (I don’t know why I thought this would come into play) but it is about how much you care and how much you love being in the outdoors.

At the end of the day, I know I am doing the best I can, and that is good enough. Just like everyone else in the 20s and 30s group, I am building a career, holding down a full-time job, finishing school, and participating in my other volunteer efforts. It can sometimes be hard for us young members to balance everything at once. For me at least, the AMC helps achieve a balance I can live with. I know people see our efforts, they see how hard we are trying and they appreciate it. They really do, and that is what matters.

Thanks to everyone for making my first weekend hosting one to remember! Particularly, a big thank you to Chelsea Tweed, my co-host, and Katie Vaughan and Kathy Ellis, the previous Squam hosts, for some wonderful insights! Next time, I won’t panic at all—Okay, maybe just once or . . . .
The trail descriptions can be found in the White Mountain Guide. The Squam Lakes Association has very nice waterproof maps available at their office on Route 3/25 on the south side of the lake or you can create and print yourself a useful map on www.caltopo.com.

Lower Peaks in the White Mountains: Even on beautiful weekend days when the trails to the high peaks and other popular mountains are crowded, it is usually possible to find peace and solitude on the lower peaks and the trails leading to them. Just because these peaks are lower doesn't necessarily mean that many of them do not have spectacular views of their own. Indeed, many experienced mountain explorers have found that some of the most impressive views come from looking up at higher peaks instead of always looking down.

Wonderful examples of lower peaks worth a visit are Mount Tremont and Owl's Cliff in the Carrigain and Moat region between the Kancamagus Highway (Route 112) and Route 302. For a true solitary wilderness experience, approach from the Kanc on the Sawyer Pond Trail to the Brunel Trail.

This route requires wading across the Swift at a sandy ford and should only be attempted when water flow is relatively low. Another southern approach can be made following the Rob Brook Trail from Bear Notch Road but it is on a cross-country ski trail and can be very wet. Also, you should bear in mind that the trails from the south are lightly used and may be obscure at times. A shorter, more frequently followed approach from the north is along the Mount Tremont Trail starting on Route 302.

Another lower peak worth visiting is Middle Sugarloaf off the Zealand Road. While this peak gets more traffic, it is much less busy than the popular high peaks. It is also a great hike to introduce children to the joys of hiking. The trail is manageable and the hike to the top takes only about an hour. At the top there are open ledges that would be perfect for a picnic. At the bottom, there is a pleasant stream to cool off and play after the hike is complete.

Trail descriptions can be found in the White Mountain Guide.

Cross Country Ski Trails: Extensive networks of cross country ski trails are present throughout New Hampshire. While you may think of these trails primarily when snow is on the ground, they can provide great places to find solitude in warmer weather. In choosing appropriate ski trails to use for hiking, it is important to consider whether a particular trail will be too wet for a pleasant hike. Frequently, cross country trails are routed through marshy areas which are frozen solid in the winter, but which can be unpleasant slogs when the snow turns to mud. If you review a trail map combined with a topological map before setting out you should be able to plan a route that avoids low points with wet ground. If you pick a good route, and it really isn’t hard, you will find a pleasant quiet alternative for even the busiest summer day.

Finally, when you venture out, be sure to carry a pack with the ten essentials. You should follow this rule for any hike, but it is even more critical when you are exploring off the beaten track. See the May/June 2018 issue of Mountain Passages for a refresher. Back issues of Mountain Passages are available online at https://amc-nh.org/members/MP/index.php.

AMC Outreach: Lincoln-Woodstock National Night Out

Sam Jamke, Denise Carter and Bob McLaughlin staffed the AMC/New Hampshire Chapter Table at the National Night Out held in Lincoln, NH on August 7. This was our first time there and despite reduced attendance due to a thunderstorm early in the evening, our table attracted interest and we were able to spread the word about the AMC.

Brochures, back issues of Mountain Passages, and other materials were available. We were pleased by the interest of the visitors to our table and enjoyed introducing them to the Appalachian Mountain Club and the New Hampshire Chapter. All in all, it was a worthwhile outreach event!
AMC-NH Chapter’s Annual Meeting 2018

The AMC-New Hampshire Chapter’s Annual Meeting for 2018 will be held on Saturday, October 20, 2018 at the Grapponge Conference Center, 70 Constitution Avenue, Concord, NH.

The Social Hour begins at 5:30 pm (appetizers and cash bar), with a buffet dinner at 6:30 pm. A brief business meeting and presentations to the Chapter’s 25-Year and 50-Year members will follow dinner.

Our Featured Speaker will be the incredible adventurer, Wendy Booker. Wendy, who was diagnosed with relapsing-remitting multiple sclerosis in 1998, refused to let the disease define her. Instead, she has responded by establishing goals that would challenge anyone, including completing marathons, reaching the poles and taking on the world’s highest summits. As Wendy has said: “My mission is always to educate, motivate and challenge anyone facing an obstacle in life to push through and climb on — the view from the top is breathtaking.” We expect Wendy will be a truly inspirational speaker.

Cost is $40 for AMC Members, $45 for Non Members. Mail your check made payable to AMC NH to Debbie Marcus, P.O. Box 63, Quechee, VT 05059. Please provide your name, address, email, and phone number. Online registration will be available starting Sept 1, 2018.

Registration for the 2018 Fall Gathering is OPEN!

Remember the Connecticut Chapter is hosting AMC’s Fall Gathering at Black Pond, Camp Woodstock on the weekend of October 12-14. Registration is open and registrations are speeding along at quite an impressive pace. This is one of AMC’s largest and best events each year, and it is hosted by a different chapter every year. It is worth the trip to Connecticut! For more information, visit the fall gathering website: www.outdoors.org/fallgathering.

Leadership Training: One Day Class 3 Leader Training

Activity: Leadership Training
Status: OPEN

This training is for those interested in becoming leaders for hikes and walks at lower elevations. This session will allow you to become a class 3 leader for NH chapter. Training will include exercises in group dynamics, trip planning and logistics, and outdoor practice in leading. Up to 8 participants will work in a small group with two instructors to understand the method for planning and leading trips to smaller mountains or natural areas and the seashore. The group members will use different learning techniques to try out and understand the many roles of leader and how to apply these techniques to outings. This training is particularly suited for those wishing to get started as trip leaders.

Time spent on “hands on” outside learning experiences will be maximized.

BY KAITLYN BERNARD - MAINE POLICY MANAGER

Here in New England, much of our energy infrastructure is regional. States have varying energy demands and independently set targets and renewable energy goals. Recently, Massachusetts put out a request for proposals to bring additional renewable energy to the state.

Central Maine Power’s “New England Clean Energy Connect (NECEC)” proposal was selected through that process. The proposal from Central Maine Power includes a transmission line project through Maine to transport HydroQuebec hydropower from Quebec to Massachusetts. The proposed line would include 53.5 miles of a new 150-foot-wide cleared corridor through undeveloped forest. The remaining 91.5 miles would be co-located within existing transmission corridors but would entail widening of the corridor and/or the installation of taller towers in many areas.

The Appalachian Mountain Club (AMC) is opposed to the New England Clean Energy Connect (NECEC) transmission line as currently proposed. AMC has four primary concerns with this project:

- The significant scenic impact to the Kennebec Gorge, a nationally significant whitewater boating area whose value is recognized in a wide range of state laws and policies.
- The increased scenic impact to the Appalachian Trail.
- The fragmenting impact of the new corridor through undeveloped forest of high ecological value and conservation interest.
- The lack of evidence that the project will provide real greenhouse gas reduction benefits.

You can read our full position on our website.

AMC strongly believes that we need to transition away from a fossil fuel-based economy and address climate change impacts. These efforts require a variety of tools, including increased energy efficiency and the development of new renewable energy sources. Technological advances and new market tools offer cost effective alternatives to the current large scale energy generation and long distance transmission model with its large environmental foot print. The impacts of this project and lack of evidence that it is generating new renewable energy resources are concerning. We are more interested in exploring new models including distributed energy and local renewable generation that would eliminate the need for a 145 mile transmission line.

AMC is closely following this issue and will alert interested members when there are opportunities to weigh in. We expect opportunities for public comment to be scheduled later this fall. If you would like to stay in the loop, please join AMC’s Conservation Action Network or get in touch with AMC’s Maine Policy Manager Kaitlyn Bernard (kbernard@outdoors.org).

August Camp 2019- Mount Rainier National Park
_July 13 to August 10_

Since 1887, just eleven years after its founding, the Appalachian Mountain Club has been sponsoring August Camp. While August Camp originally was held at different sites in New England, in 1940 August Camp was held in Keene Valley in New York’s Adirondack Mountains. Starting in 1956, August Camp was held further afield. That year the Camp was held in Aspen, Colorado. In recent years, various iconic locations in the west have been the venues selected for August Camp. In 2018, Camp was held in Washington’s North Cascades, based at a site near Concrete, WA, right on the Skagit River.

In 2019 the site of August Camp will be Packwood, WA, just south of Mount Rainier National Park, where much of the hiking will be. Only 64 campers can attend at any time, but August Camp runs for 4 weeks and most people attend for one week or two.

Want to participate in this summer camp for adults? It is easy. Just bring your personal items (e.g., clothing and toilet items), backpack, sleeping and hiking gear, and we do all the rest. Meals and van transportation from/to the designated airport and daily activities are included. However, you need to register, and register in time. In 2018, the available spots were all claimed before the end of January. Registration opens January 2, 2019. For more information, visit www.augustcamp.org.
